TREASURE RIGHT HERE

Emeralds and Pieces of Gold Armor Recovered From the Sacred Lake of the Chibchas

REASURES of a true El Dorado, solid gold and rare emeralds that belonged to an ancient civilization, have been in New Tork for the last few weeks and some of them are still here. The jewels in the pocket of a sack coat went back and forth through the corridors of the Waldorf and the hand wrought gold lay exposed o public view on Fifth avenue. It sounds lke romance, but it's so. At a Fifth avenue shop have reposed ome of the pieces of gold armor recovered ecently from the bottom of a lake in Colombia. Emeralds have been carried ather carelessly about by an engineer one of the companies concerned in the covery of the treasures supposed still fo lie at the bottom of the lake. The story back of it all is as fascinating as that of the Incas or the chronicles of Aztec

Much has been told of the treasures of El Dorado and of the search of the Spanards for them. But the popular impression kening El Dorado to a will-o'-the-wisp and implying that the Spaniards never found their goal is incorrect.

El Dorado was found and just where the Spaniards sought it-in South America. But they did not find El Dorado what they believed it to be, namely, a teritable land of gold. The real El Dorado was a man, the "Golden One" or the "Gilded Man," and he was found uling the Chibcha kingdom, a nation laving over a million inhabitants in as high a state of civilization as the Incas of Peru or the Aztecs of Mexico.

The Chibcha nation occupied a plateau h the northern Colombian Andes, over 49,600 feet above sea level. On this plateau were five small lakes known as Guata-Guasco, Siecha, Teuseca and Ubaquo. of these, Guatavita, which occupied the most northerly part of the plateau, was sacred and played an important part all the Chibcha religious rites and eremonies. Circular, about a mile in pircumference, its great depth of water appealed particularly to the Indian in making his offerings or sacrifices to his ceities. To this day the old paths or roads leading from the principal towns and worn into the rocks by the tramp of millions and millions of feet are plainly visible.

In prehistoric times this great Andea plateau, the home of the Chibchas, was a yast lake or rather a string of lakes separated by short mountain spurs. The soil, of great fertility, was quite capable of supporting the enormous population found there by the Spaniards. One city, Usaquen, is said to have had over a million hhabitants. This last statement may be taken with a grain of the proverbial salt, lowever, as the Spanish conquistadores were prone to exaggerate their accounts of lands no one else had ever seen.

But it may be that Lake Guatavita is ene of the most valuable mines in the world, for in it are said to have been thrown as offerings to an evil spirit supposed to dwell in its depths gold and sunningly designed figures of gods of that virgin metal.

In 1636 Juan Rodiguez Fresle wrote history of the discovery and conquest of New Granada and of El Dorado. This volume is thought to be the most accurate and detailed account of the Chibchas and their nation now extant. According Fresle's account of the discovery of who was a captain under Pizarro, a strange Indian arrived from the north and told an unusual story of the ceremonies on Lake to the whereabouts of gold in that vicinity. Don Sebastian, knowing that of getting him out of the way, determined name of the Province of El Dorado to his prospective conquest.

bia which led through the Cauca Valley mad removed. No great amount of and against the advice of his Indian treasure can be removed until the bottom extreme northern end of Colombia and centuries ago when the Spaniards arhe doubled back and arrived at Neiva gether with vast quantities of unbroken in the Magdalena Valley only to learn pottery containing gold, ornaments and that he had been forestalled, by a few jewels. months only, by the famous Capt. Gonzalo conquered the entire Chibcha nation. Santa Fé of Bogota in 1539, leaving soon and it should not be long before the whole after to return to Spain to relate their truth is known. several stories of conquests in the Colomby the Indians, the greater portion of monies of the Chibcha religion followed the private treasure of the Guata vita (as closely those of the Chinese Buddhists. the ruler or prince-priest of the Chibchas ure into the lake and one of these is related to have disposed of about two tons f gold and jewels in that manner.

Many attempts were made by the Spaniards to drain the lake and recover some of the wealth. De Quesada gave the lake to his lieutenant, Lasare Fonte, who lacked the necessary money to carry out his plans for drawing off the water. It then passed into the hands of de Quesada's brother, Hernando Perez de Quesada, who succeeded in lowering the water ten feet and taking out quite a quantity of gold and jewelled images.

As the lake was really a possession of the Spanish Crown these men had no authority to remove the treasure, and one Antonio de Sepulveda, a merchant of Sante Fé, realizing this, made the trip to Spain, where he obtained a concession of the lake and its contents. He subsequently spent a fortune on it and suceeded in getting out quantities of gold and emeralds which were turned over to the officers of the Spanish Crown. Sepulveda's contract with the Government called for an absolute draining of the lake, however, and the Government refused to divide the spoils with him until this was done. A scarcity of funds put an end to that attempt to drain the lake and, beyond experience, Sepulveds received little or nothing for his efforts.

Numerous minor attempts were later

CARIBBEAN

results were attained. In 1823 José Ignacio Paris and Capt. Charles Stuart Cochrane, R. N., made another unsuccessful effort to recover the treasure. In 1897, a Colombian company was formed to drain the lake, but after several vain attempts the company gladly sold out to the 'Contractors, Ltd., a company now in possession of the sacred lake of Guatavita. In spite of numerous drawbacks and a revolution the lake was finally drained dry in 1904.

Sand and mud to a depth of nearly fifty feet have been removed from the centre and along the ditch to the tunnel, through El Dorado, shortly after the founding of which the mud is being washed. Although continually pressing in from the sides to the centre, causing the bottom to form Guatavita, when asked the usual question a cup, whereas when first drained the lake's bed was quite flat.

Many gold ornaments have been re-Pizarro was jealous of him and desirous covered within the last two years, together with a large collection of emeralds to start immediately in search of El and strings of beads and a lot of quaint Dorado or the Golden Man. According old pottery. It is conjectured that these to a custom of those days, he gave the have been carried to the centre by the the cacique's harem. Often these feasts pressure and movement of the mud from the sides. A steam shovel is to be erected Don Sebastian chose a route into Colom- in the centre soon and fifty more feet of travelled too far north and finally of the lake is found, and that means the found himself in Cartage, a town at the bottom as it was about four and a half many miles distant from Lake Guatavita. rived. When it is reached the searchers Meeting with difficulties at every turn hope to find gold dust and nuggets, to-

Nobody can estimate the value of the de Quesada, who had reached Guatavita treasure which the lake contains, but by way of the Magdalena River and had if the histories written by the ancient onquered the entire Chibcha nation.

About the time of Sebastian's arrival fabulous wealth will be regained from at Guatavita, Capt. Nicolas Federman its depths. Guesses have from time to also arrived there, having sailed from time been made as to the probable value the Gulf of Maracaibo, in Venezuela, and of the treasure, and the most recent, that entered the Chibcha country from the of M. de la Kier of Paris, puts the conplains of the Orinoco. Together these tents of the lake at 120 millions of pounds three adventurers founded the city of sterling. The lake is now practically dry

According to Prescott's "History of the Conquest of Peru" and the story of the Aside from the vast quantities of gold religious rites enacted upon the sacred and gems which tradition says were lake of Guatavita told to Capt. Belalcazar thrown into the lake through countless by the strange Indian who led him north centuries in their religious ceremonies to the Chibcha country in 1534, the cere-

Twice a year, at harvest time and on was known) is said to have been thrown some other special occasion, such as the into the lake upon his defeat by the consecration of a new Guatabita or prince niards. Many of the minor rulers prelate, the entire Chibcha nation conof Chiboha tribes also threw their treas- gregated in one of the principal cities and made to drain the lake, but no important marched in a solemn procession, with of dollars worth of gold and jewels are music and banners flying, to the shores supposed to have been consigned to the of this lake.

reputedly unfaithful wife of one of the first caciques or guatabitas who was also were supposed to occupy a magnificent house of coral at the bottom of the lake devil. Many of the offerings thrown Quito in 1534 by Sebastian de Belalcazar, the surface is now fairly hard the mud believing that if well treated she might into the lake were for her, the Chibchas below is in a semi-liquid state and is use her influence with the serpent for

Following the consignment of the treasure to the water the Chibchas gave themselves up to a round of joyous festivity. drinking deeply and at great length of sparkling yellow liquor which was handed articles of adornment. to Pizzaro's followers "in golden vases of extraordinary size" by the women of became orgies and for days and weeks the people kept up a round of festivities.

These ceremonies had been going on for hundreds of years before the coming of the Spaniards and in that time millions water, only a small portion of which An ancient Chibcha tradition told of the has been recovered.

Among the treasures found is a breast plate of pure beaten gold measuring supposed to dwell in the depths of the thirteen inches by ten inches and weighing lake. Her lover, who was one of her eight ounces and eight pennyweights husband's slaves, was impaled alive and Other finds are four solid gold birds such indignities heaped upon her that she with lizard heads, one of which is complete threw herself into the lake, together with and has two gold nose ring disks; two her daughter and a nurse. The three serpents of beaten gold, with the head welded on and standing erect with forked tongue and wearing earrings; the figure and to be on good terms with the serpent of a woman in gold supposed to represent the mother of the Chibcha race; a warrior's or cacique's skull cap in thin beaten gold, seven inches in diameter and weigh ing six ounces; two head bands in thin beaten gold and several smoothly beaten gold drinking cups. Numerous quaint articles of Chibcha pottery have been found which contained emeralds of a very fine quality, as well as quantities of the big rotunda, with broad windows ically records all sorts of information chicha, the fermented juice of the maize, a gold nose rings, pendants, images and looking down upon the throngs and the that must be absorbed and ready at his

Apparently all of these things have and go. It is an ample room with only flash: by the constant moving and pressure of the mud. It will be interesting to see what will come to light when the actual bottom of the lake is reached and the former treasure of the Golden Man and his people are finally recovered.

little less than forty-four seconds.

tracks below, where the trains come tongue's end. The telautograph may come from the sides of the lake and have one door, that door leading into the supposedly been carried toward the centre corridor. On the door is printed "No told that the road's president and Admittance," and it is the one door a party of inspectors are on 293. Next in the whole station that nobody's knock will open. In the centre of the room is a double faced switchboard that could accom-

Pennsylvania Information Bureau Kept Constantly Busy During Twenty-four Hours ERHAPS one man in 100,000 is modate a dozen operators. On a rack fitted by nature for a job above it are time tables for every here," said the chief of the branch of the Long Island and Penn-

Pennsylvania Station's information bureau, "but so far as I know no one so fitted has ever worked in the de-

"If one were born with enough pa"If one were born with enough patience, good nature and capacity for ing information on every conceivable tience, good nature and capacity for subject pertaining to travel. On the wait in Chicago, where dining cars will snap and quick mental action to answer the public's inquiries without stopping to think, and we have no time to think when the lines are busy-we must know without thinking.

"Patience, good nature, mild retorts and control of temper are acquired habits with us; sort of occupational diseases, you might say. I've seen a man with a boil on his neck and another on his leg that made him stand through his whole trick answer eighty questions an hour for five hours and not once utter a discourteous word. A minute after he'd taken off his telephone headpiece he'd be in a wordy war with another member of the force. I've seen that same man all but thrash his eightyear-old boy for asking questions that were perfectly proper for a bright, knowledge seeking youngster to ask his daddy. We put on our patience when we shed our coats for work, and courtesy is as much a part of the equipment as are the telephones.

"When a young man who has learned to read schedules and make up rates is transferred to us from the ticket department the hardest thing he has to learn is how to please. We put him to keeping records and the like till he absorbs a bit of the atmosphere and learns the routine. Then we give him a telephone without a mouthpiece so he can't talk back to those who are sometimes testy and insulting and let him listen to our conversations.

"In time he gets our viewpoint-that we are paid to be mild before the bully, always helpful and invariably courteous. He learns to whom he should say 'Good-by,' to whom 'You're welcome,' whether the inquirer would relish or resent a bit of familiarity-in short learns to know by the voice, from the manner of speech, from the way questions are put just what tone, what inflection, even what quality of language he should use.

Then some Sunday when there is little to do we let him answer questions for an hour-not for long enough to get nervous and touchy. Some never get the ability to keep temper and not talk back; those we send to some de-that record this year. On the Satur-day before Labor Day four men an-board by a cord long enough to let the quiries, or 83 for each man. That stratling at first to see a man walking means that each telephone connection about the room talking to a questioner wire opened for the next applicant in a see, is a telautograph that seems never

I WANT A ROUND TICKET, NOT A SQUARE ONE.

Above the switchboard, where all may

"Special 293 passing Parkers to rest. Each operator must keep his may come: "Palm Beach, 78; water smooth," if it's winter, or Atlantic City,

And you'd be amazed at the many water at the resorts. People who want queries about the temperature and the

to go to milder climates, others who have friends there and are curious about their surroundings ask, and still many others who take only imaginary

trips and vacations call for information to help out their homely day dreams.

The telautograph records all accidents that may affect the running of trains or cause injury to passengers.

In the case of a big wreck the information bureau gets the first news and gets it all, including names of injured, and gives it out to inquirers. If a freight train on a mountain division

500 miles away breaks in two and holds up a local passenger train it is re-ported, as is the fact when it has been recoupled and is on its way. If a train that could possibly be of interest to any one in New York falls a few minutes behind its schedule that fact is knows by the time tables where every train should be at any given minute,

where a train is if through any mis-pective traveller put in two or three hap it is not where it should be.

The information bureau

72; Hght surf," if it is summer.

was made, the questions asked and an- maybe twenty miles away.

swered, the connection broken and the

UNFORMATION

sylvania systems, schedules of distances between all points, books of rates between all stations in the United States, books of connecting steamship rates, sailing dates; in fact documents giv-

ALL DAY ANSWERING

Seattle you call "Information," tell him where you want to go, when you want to start, how much baggage you have and give your name and address.

WHY DO THEY PUT THOSE FUNNY MARKS ON TIME TABLES?

walls are maps showing every town that may be reached if one starts from the Pennylvania station.

talk back; those we send to some department where they do not meet the public so intimately."

This information bureau answered from a sort of chest protector to his last year and will beat lips. His hands are thus free. The swered 3,280 calls in eight hours. In operator to go to any part of the room one hour that day there were 332 in- without breaking the connection. It's be available; in fact he'll make out a complete schedule of times and expenses and tell you the minute you'll be in Seattle. If you wish he will tell you est hotel in Seattle and give you their rates. Not only that, but he'll send a man to your house with you railway ticket, Pullman tickets and baggage checks so that you need give no further thought to your trip. As for your bag-gage, he'll check it from your apartment through to your hotel room or house address in Seattle. You bid your trunks good-by at the door and they'll be in your room in Seattle to greet "We get a lot of what would seem to an outsider very foolish questions, and some are so outlandish that they even make us smile," said the chief, "but we always put a straight face and an even voice into the telephone. We take into account that going away from home is a thrilling, nerve stirring affair for many persons and that many more who are not accustomed to using the telephone become disconcerted and say things they do not mean into the receiver.

"Another cause of delay and some-times annoyance is that many inquiries de by persons talking for others who fear to trust themselves at the telephone. The conversation must be repeated to the prospective traveller and discussd.

"Here are a few samples of what ner-yous people say. We have jotted them down as they came:
"'I want to know the excursion rate

'Does the 11 o'clock train leave at 11 "'I don't want to know about single fare; I'm married.' 'I'm going to California and I want to take an elephant with me. 'Me want know train go station behind New Brunswick."

'No, I don't want Elizabeth, N. J.; just plain Elizabeth.' 'Is Sallsbury, Del., spelled like Salisbury, N. C.?

"'I want a round ticket, not a square one; I want to come back.

'How long does it take the baggage department to go to Wisconsin? 'I want to go to Pittsburg to-night. Can I get a small room on the train?

"'Tell me when the seven dash eighteen train gets to New York?" " Has the 1 o'clock train for Philadelphia got cars for people to ride on?"

'How long does the train stay in the "'What train does the track leave from? "'What time does the station move out? "'How long can I buy a ticket before the 9:15 goes?" "'When does the next train leave for to-morrow morning?" "We know what they want and answer the question they mean to ask. We get such questions every day. A woman said to me only this morning: I'm going to Milwaukee; how long will I have to wait with the corpse in Chicago?' I knew instantly that she was taking a body to Milwaukee and answered as though her tongue had not revealed the horror that was in her heart.

"But it's a bit annoying when people ask what horse won the third race at Pimlico or want their water pipes mended. On April 1, when perhaps a thousand people call our number and ask for 'Mr. Train,' we answer: 'This is April 1. You are talking to the Pennsylvania station. Somebody's fooling you.' Even that answer often brings down wrath on our heads.

"We can tell about hotels in all cities, and we know when the curtain rises and what shows are on at the principal New York and Brooklyn theatreshave to be able to answer the patrons of our theatre trains.

"A man told me this morning that he was going to Long Island and wanted to take his boy's pet goat with him. It took fifteen minutes to make him and it knows through the telautograph understand that the goat must be crated and taken in the baggage car. A Yonkers man recently became indig-The information bureau has greatly nant because five coops of chickens and lessened the bother of preparing for a two beds could not be taken into the long journey. Time was when the pros- passenger coach with him. An Englishman took many of our precious minutes days studying schedules, arranging for last week explaining that he'd have baggage transfer and sleepers, getting nothing to do with our bloody baggage rates, hunting out connections, &c., cars'—he wanted a 'luggage van.'

